With the vegetation quite high I tried to make the controls fairly straightforward. A couple of controls proved tricky so I have not disqualified those who missed one or two. Perhaps following RF's example next year we should have 5 minute penalties for each missed control (the webmaster, who found them all but at the cost of much hunting)

I was hoping to do overprinted maps, which is standard OD practice, but this was not possible. Cost would probably have been the same, as we had run out of maps, and I would probably have saved time and got some extra practice in. This should have avoided an error I made of picking up the wrong control description on one control which meant a lot of people wasted time, failed to find it, or were at least frustrated.

I felt it necessary to warn competitors of the wood north of Swan Pool car park which apparently has an international reputation.

It was good to see a good number of beginners.

Despite the whole area being very public, I was able to collect all controls back in the next day.
